tam weight of the South, in opening his classes at Sparks and Black's Hall last hight, gave a complimentary athletic exhibition to his friends.

Henning, weighing in at 118, met two youngsters of about even weight. The arrangement was that he should beat them both in ten rounds. He did it in time than that, both men throwing up the sponge before the sixth round was reached.

was reached.

The two bouts, which were entirely within the statutes, were witnessed by about 300 well known sporting men, officials and men about town.

Henning showed his superiority in three of the five rounds. His two opponents displayed clever work, but the superior generalship of Henning told on them, and Referes Reinecke gave him the decision in each instance.

Coplan was the first man to face Henning. He was a triffe heavier than the champlon, but was slower on his feet. He went down against the ropes twice in the first round.

Bouts by Rounds.

The bout in detail follows:

First round. Henning went in for an upper cut, but missed the mark, and received a blow on the right jaw, which caused him to smile, as he went for Coplan's jugular The latter dodged, but received another on the mouth, which staggered him. Henning got his man sgainst the ropes and gave two strong uppercuts before the referee broke them away. He then went in for body blows and dodged a good one from Coplan, who was putting them at him in good shape, when the time-keeper called time. This was Henning's round.

Becond round-Coplan led with a good one to Henning's round.

Becond round-Coplan led with a good one to Henning's ribs. The champion went against the ropes, but recovered before Coplan could follow up his advantage. For a minute there was sparring for an opening. The champion saw a chance and caught the youngster one on the slats, which wilded him. The champion followed this up with a succession of upper cuts and Taid all the best of it to the end of the round.

Third round—This was Coplan's round. He rushed matters and had the champion on the defensive. His upper cuts told, but it looked like a dodge on the part of Henning, and Coplan was badly winded at the close, but carried the honors.

Fourth round—Henning went in with a on the jaw, and followed with one on the nose, before Henning got in a blow. After that he was out of it. The champion rushed the youngster into the corner against the ropes and put in half a dozen body blows before Bernstein, could recover. The latter went to his knees, and Henning gave him one on the jugular at that point. The referee, being unable to decide whether Bernstein went down of his own accord or slipped, could not call "foul." He warned both men, however. In the next break-away the champion got a good one in on the solar plexus, and just as the time-keeper was about to call time the sponge was thrown up, and the champion,

SAID THAT STOCK WILL BE POOLED

Baltimore on Qui Vive for Developments in Seaboard.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BALTIMORE, MD., July 15.-Local fi-nancial circles were agog to-day with innancial circies were agog to-day with interest in the affairs of the Seaboard Air Line Railway. Following the directors' meeting held in New York Wednesday, the presence in Baltimore of B. Guinness, of the New York banking house of Ladenburg, Thalman and Company; of John Skelton Williams, chairman of the board of directors of the Seaboard, and Eppa
Hunton, a leading member of the bankers' committee in charge of the affairs of John L. Williams and Sons and J.
William Middendorf and Company, excited considerable comment. Mr. Guinness was in sconference with a number of local interests who control large heldings in the Seaboard outside of the Middendorf-Williams stock. This led to a rumor that the pooling of the stock of the company would be undertaken, and that this pool would get in more than a majority of the stock. It is also the belief that the movement would be independent of the Blair-Ryan-Coolidge interest in the property, and that it would resuit in some highly important changes in the management. It is also expected that the interests back of the pooling scheme, would buy the stock of the MiddendorfWilliams interests, alther all or a very considerable portion of it. terest in the affairs of the Seaboard Air
